Bum was a real dog born in San Francisco on July 3, 1886. He came to San Diego as a stowaway on a ship called the Santa Rosa. No one owned Bum but everyone took care of him. One day, Bum got into a fight with another dog at the Santa Fe Depot train station. A train hit them and Bum lost his paw, but he kept right on exploring the city. Bum was a friend to many people. He was so loved by San Diegans, his picture was placed on the city’s dog license. His memory lives on with the San Diego History Center’s Kids Club.
Bum learns about San Diego architecture!

Bum is always interested in learning about people who changed history and helped make San Diego beautiful. Explore with Bum as he discovers more about famous San Diego architect Irving J. Gill. Make sure to visit our new exhibition Irving J. Gill: New Architecture for a Great Country (open Sept 24, 2016-March 26, 2017) and find Bum in the galleries!

Irving J. Gill was born in 1870 and came to San Diego as a young man. He designed many private homes and public buildings and became known for his simple and clean style of architecture that used the beauty of Southern California as part of his design.

Help Bum build a new doghouse.

You can get ideas from the shapes and details Irving J. Gill used, or you can design something entirely your own!

- cube
- band window
- columns
- door
- arch

Build Bum a new doghouse in the space below. See the Ellen Browning Scripps house above for inspiration.